PulsePoint Experience — GA-Atlanta

Workplace experience report card · completed responses

76

Overall composite 76 / 100 · Top third of sites (+8 vs avg)

Rank 1 of 10 · Top third of sites · sites range 65–76

Official dimension weights; simple average of the four dimensions = 77 (matches the Tableau deck)

276 of 2,928 respondents (this site vs. all 10 sites) · 390 written comments

Employee agreement 4.05/5 — above company (significant) (company 3.72, p=0.00)

Comment sentiment: 29% positive · 32% neutral · 39% negative

Work Activity	Physical	Services	Technology
71 #1/10	74 #1/10	83 #1/10	78 #1/10

Big number = workplace-support composite (0–100); boxes show each area's composite and its rank among the 10 sites. Tier = thirds of the 10-site distribution (relative standing, not an absolute pass/fail cutoff). (+/–) = vs. the company average. Employee-agreement significance = Welch t-test vs. the other in-scope sites.

Dimension summary — Importance vs Support (1–5)

Dimension	Imp	Sup	Gap	Status	Agree
Work Activity	3.4	3.8	+0.4	On track	3.68
Physical Feature	3.8	4.0	+0.1	On track	4.20
Service Level	3.9	4.3	+0.4	On track	4.20
Digital & Tech	—	4.1	—	Strong	4.12

Status: red = Needs attention · green = On track · orange = Exceeds needs. Digital & Tech is agreement-only, rated on the 1–5 agreement level (Strong ≥4.0 / Moderate 3.5–3.9 / Needs attention <3.5). “Agree” = each area's summary question (Q8/Q12/Q16/Q19; Q16 = Services, Q19 = Technology by survey position); its color marks above/below the rest of the company (Welch t-test, p<0.05).

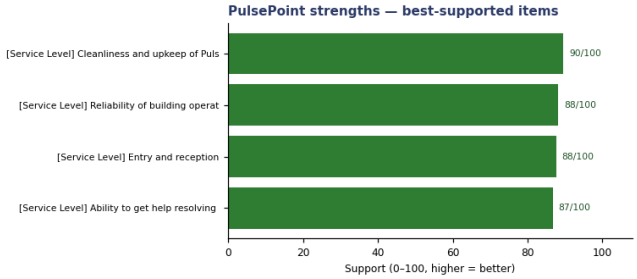

Dimension detail — by question (Gap = Support – Importance)

Dimension topic (question)	Imp	Sup	Gap	Status
Work Activity
Planned in-person meetings at a PulsePoint	2.3	4.1	+1.7	Exceeds needs
Informal or spontaneous collaboration with colleagues	2.8	3.8	+1.1	On track
Working with others on shared tasks or problem-solving	3.1	3.8	+0.7	On track
Learning, training, or skill development	3.6	3.8	+0.2	On track
Tasks requiring discretion	3.7	3.7	+0.0	On track
Virtual collaboration with remote or hybrid colleagues	4.1	4.0	-0.2	Needs attention
Focused individual work that requires concentration and mini	4.2	3.7	-0.5	Needs attention
Physical Feature
Availability of community spaces (i.e. gathering, event spac	3.0	4.2	+1.2	On track
Availability of meeting and collaboration spaces (individual	3.5	4.1	+0.6	On track
Availability of spaces that support personal wellbeing or re	3.5	4.0	+0.5	On track
Ease of navigating and finding spaces (directions and signag	3.9	4.1	+0.2	On track
Lighting comfort (natural and artificial)	4.1	4.1	+0.1	On track

Furniture comfort and ergonomics (including adjustability of	4.1	4.1	+0.0	On track
Availability of spaces that support discretion	4.1	3.6	-0.4	Needs attention
Thermal / temperature comfort	4.2	3.8	-0.4	Needs attention
Availability of spaces that support focused work	4.3	3.7	-0.6	Needs attention
Service Level
Entry and reception	3.3	4.5	+1.2	On track
Support from a community manager	3.4	4.2	+0.8	On track
Access to workplace support services that support daily need	3.4	3.9	+0.5	On track
Cleanliness and upkeep of PulsePoint	4.3	4.6	+0.3	On track
Ability to get help resolving workplace or technology issues	4.3	4.5	+0.2	On track
Availability of on-site food and beverage options	3.6	3.8	+0.2	On track
Communication about workplace updates, changes, or disruptio	4.2	4.4	+0.2	On track
Reliability of building operations (e.g., elevators, restroo	4.5	4.5	+0.1	On track
Digital & Tech
Digital collaboration tools (e.g., Microsoft tools) support	—	4.2	—	Strong
Reservation tools are easy to use	—	4.2	—	Strong
Technical issues that affect my ability to work are resolved	—	4.1	—	Strong
I can connect and start working at a PulsePoint without unne	—	4.1	—	Strong
Workplace-provided hardware (e.g., monitors, keyboards, mice	—	4.1	—	Strong
Video conferencing and meeting room technology reliably supp	—	4.0	—	Strong

Where support falls short & strengths

Who responded — demographics

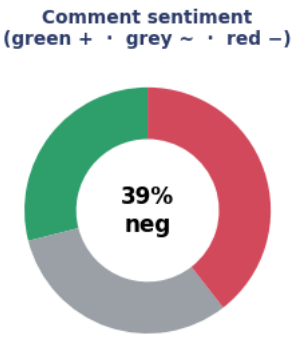

Role	#	%
Associate	180	65%
Director or Manager	96	35%

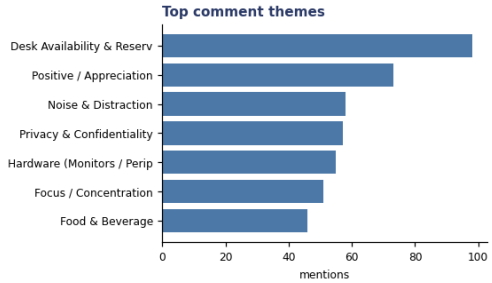

Tenure	#	%
More than 10 years	120	43%
6 to 10 years	79	29%
2 to 5 years	59	21%
6 mos to 24 mos.	16	6%
Less than 6 mos.	2	1%

Hybrid category	#	%
Hybrid 1 - 1-2 Days/We	178	64%
Hybrid 2 - 3-4 Days/We	95	34%
I don't know	2	1%
Onsite - 5 Days/Week O	1	0%

Open-ended responses

Overall comment sentiment is 39% negative and 29% positive. Top area to address: Focused / Private Work.

Top priorities to address

Category	# comments	% neg	priority
Focused / Private Work	122	45%	74
Physical Environment	148	49%	73
Technology	109	43%	55
Policy / Experience	100	27%	46
Workplace Operations	94	32%	44

In their words — what to fix

“When someone sits down at a station that is reserved, there is no indication. It would be helpful to discourage them from using what's been reserved.”

— Associate, 2 to 5 years · Desk Availability & Reservations · represents ~44 similar

“The only other thing is the ability to store/maintain required, hard-copy legal documents. The PulsePoint doesn't really facilitate that and, at least in my view, home isn't the best place for that type of document to be stored.”

— Associate, More than 10 years · Positive / Appreciation · represents ~8 similar

“Some locations can be too noisy because people tend to take phone calls in the hallway areas.”

— Associate, More than 10 years · Noise & Distraction · represents ~30 similar

“The limited number of capsules to have meetings that require discretion. The limitation of 2 hours in each capsule.”

— Director or Manager, More than 10 years · Privacy & Confidentiality · represents ~28 similar

Appendix — Comments by category & sentiment

Up to 8 comments per category/sentiment shown here to keep the report shareable. The complete log of all 390 comments is in the HTML report (expandable) and the per-site verbatim CSV export.

Focused / Private Work (117 total)

NEGATIVE · 56 (+48 more in HTML/CSV)

- The need for privacy with a full workstation (e.g., two monitors with a power cord). Too many of the additional workspaces don't support much more than a laptop, which is not sufficient for me. — Director or Manager, 2 to 5 years

- The limitations placed on the capsule spaces (small office spaces with additional monitors) for people leaders is a hinderance. As people leaders we have to meet with our associates in 1-1 sessions monthly and additionally for any CAP discussions or performance/behavior issues that may arise outside of the regular meeting cadence. I think that the reservation timeframe for people leaders for these spaces should be increased to 4 hours and for nonpeople leaders it can remain at two hours. This would provide us with a block of time we can schedule our 1-1 meetings other meetings that require discretion during those times. It would give us more leverage and autonomy on how we schedule our day while in office and allow us to have the same or very similar set up we have in our home office. This would allow for example...screensharing on one monitor with the associate (ie metrics, etc) while leveraging the additional monitor to take notes on the call for our associate records. Trying to do this on a laptop is extremely challenging and having these types of conversation in a cube with other associates around doesn't protect the privacy of the associates. While I completely understand the need to provide structure around reserving these spaces and individuals booking these spaces for the entire day is unnecessary, the limitation of two hours for these spaces for people leaders is cumbersome especially with the requirement of being in office 3 days per week. Also, considering that we could be pulled into a conversation that requires discretion at any moment of the day. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

- no privacy - workstations are too close and often workplaces are noisy. — Associate, More than 10 years

- My PulsePoint needs more private spaces for phone calls and virtual meetings at the office. Also, it would be nice if we could collaborate in person with co-workers located at other offices. I have never had the opportunity to meet my team in person. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

- We need more true 'offices' with doors. In sales, we make a lot of phone calls and participate in a lot of virtual meetings. It is really frustrating to be constantly getting up, packing up my laptop and looking for a room. I have a few co-workers that are extremely loud on calls and it is so frustrating to listen to it all day long. — Associate, More than 10 years

- I am a Training Specialist and interact learners all over the states. The workstations do not allow privacy. There are times were my voice my interrupt others. However, the workstation does provide two additional screens that are needed to perform effective training. — Associate, More than 10 years

- I'm on a ton of meetings and it's really hard to do those sitting in a cube. With the low walls, there is no privacy for conversations. Even if the topic isn't confidential, it still feels like you are disturbing everyone around you by talking. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

- Individual work with minimal interruption and tasks requiring discretion is not fully supported. There should be more capsule space with monitors. Focus rooms are all we have to use with a time cap on them — Associate, 2 to 5 years

NEUTRAL / MIXED · 37 (+29 more in HTML/CSV)

- The focus and connect modules are not soundproof and muffled conversations are audible. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

- Projects with NDAs associated and work is with external entities. There is a challenge finding space for several hours where work is not overheard or seen. — Director or Manager, 2 to 5 years

- the 2 hour restriction for rooms to be productive should be 4 hour limit for those of us who work on sensitive topics, have meetings on sensitive topics and work on sensitive information. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

- The office environment could be improved in a few areas. Temperature control is often challenging, with some workspaces consistently feeling quite cold. Additionally, noise levels can be disruptive at times, particularly when calls and meetings are conducted in open areas. I also have concerns about workplace wellness. Given the in-office requirements, there appears to be a tendency for some employees to come into the office when visibly ill, which can create discomfort and increase the potential for illness transmission in shared workspaces. Finally, because many of us collaborate primarily with colleagues in other states, the value of in-office attendance is not always realized through increased face-to-face collaboration. Exploring opportunities to better align in-office expectations with team locations and collaboration needs may improve the overall employee experience. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

- Quiet rest areas. There is no where to go to get away from work in a common space without music. — Associate, More than 10 years

- 60% of the work I'm engaged is sensitive. Pulsepoint does not easily support private office for Directors and/or leaders in governance /enforcement roles — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

- The cubes we have does not allow for private conversations. Yes, there are huddle rooms and the phone booth we can go into, but those are often full and I simply don't have time to walk around to find a more private place. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• Client Management teams on the 19th floor are on virtual calls throughout the day. It is difficult to have to leave your desk with the extra screen and move to a free location where you are not disturbing others around you. It would be nice if the workspaces had more sound proofing and you could stay in the same location vs. having to unplug and find a private area and lose the extra screen. This would help with productivity. — Associate, More than 10 years

POSITIVE · 24 (+16 more in HTML/CSV)

• I would prefer to work remotely on a permanent basis. I have a dedicated home office that provides a quiet, distraction-free environment for focused work. In addition, gas prices are rising, and my role does not require in-person customer interaction. Most of my colleagues are located in different states, so our collaboration and conversations will continue to take place virtually. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• I do not have colleagues at my office, so when I go in, I continue to engage with fellow associates remotely. That is why I put PulsePoint does not support my work activities. It is often easier to engage with colleagues remotely, as I don't have to get up and relocate to a private, temporary office. — Associate, 6 mos to 24 mos.

• I love the Quiet workspace zone. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• My responses are largely driven by the nature of my role, which requires significant focused individual work, analysis, forecasting, and virtual collaboration. For an extended period, I have had limited opportunities for in-person collaboration with members of my immediate team because most collaboration occurs remotely through Teams. As a result, commuting to the office often results in participating in the same virtual meetings I would attend from another location, while working with fewer monitors and less screen space than my primary workstation. Since my work is heavily data- and analysis-oriented, the reduced workspace can negatively affect productivity. The office environment is visually appealing and well maintained. However, the workspace can be challenging for concentration due to frequent conversations, speakerphone meetings, and personal phone use in nearby areas. For employees whose work requires sustained focus and minimal interruption, these conditions can make productive work more difficult. Overall, my responses reflect the fact that my role benefits most from quiet, distraction-free environments that support focused analytical work and effective virtual collaboration. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• Availability of space that supports discretion — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• I find it challenging to reserve a focused room for focused working. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• It will be great to have some partition between workstations. When my dedicated floor was on maintenance, I found some section of 14 floor workstations with partition can help more with focus work. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• I really enjoy working in the Atlanta office. I like the various types of spaces that are available so I can change up the view when I want. I also appreciate the availability of conference rooms for meetings and I like how quiet the floors are normally for thinking work. There are occasionally 'huddles' in common spaces where noise bleeds over, but the vast majority of the time everything works as planned and I can concentrate. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

Collaboration & Meetings (48 total)

NEGATIVE · 17 (+9 more in HTML/CSV)

• Currently we are not able to reserve capsule more than once in a day. As a manager, at times I have schedule interviews and it can be difficult to reserve a room with the current restriction in frequency and/or max time. Interviews are scheduled in intervals of 30 minutes and are not always consecutively, so this presents a challenge when working in the office. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

• My PulsePoint needs more private spaces for phone calls and virtual meetings at the office. Also, it would be nice if we could collaborate in person with co-workers located at other offices. I have never had the opportunity to meet my team in person. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• In my experience common areas are very cold and do not allow for the focused/discretionary work I must complete. Reserved spaces are often occupied when I arrive. Screens no longer update to show that a focus/capsule is reserved. It is uncomfortable when I have to enforce my reservation and ask someone to relocate. It is also frustrating that I am limited to only two hours per day to reserve focus/capsule. I am a people leader 8 hours a day, I often have unscheduled/unplanned conversations in addition to planned conversations that aren't appropriate for being held in the common areas. I am often also engaged in lively and collaborative meetings that require me to be able to speak freely and I know that is distracting to other people when I am in a common area. It may not be appropriate to compare my role to other roles but it seems as though the focus/capsule areas should be reserved for people leaders and ICs at a certain level vs. open to everyone and that they should be able to be reserved for longer periods of time. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• Not enough discretion spaces with for meetings where not all should here. Not enough meeting rooms with MS Teams, some have tech we do not use for meetings. — Associate, More than 10 years

• As mentioned earlier, having to relocate for a call or when a colleague calls spontaneously is disruptive. — Associate, 6 mos to 24 mos.

• Need more private rooms with monitors to be able to take calls without having to work off of a laptop. Need more of that space vs the small meeting rooms and huddle rooms. Those are nice but you have to use your laptop screen which can be difficult. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• booking a meeting room sometimes is not possible for adhoc calls that you need to get when there is Production issue that needs to be addressed — Director or Manager, 2 to 5 years

• The music can be too loud especially when trying to eat lunch and converse on the 8th floor and many times in meeting rooms the music is too loud — Associate, 6 mos to 24 mos.

NEUTRAL / MIXED · 16 (+8 more in HTML/CSV)

• Work that requires longer than a 2 hour reservation for meeting rooms — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

• The office environment could be improved in a few areas. Temperature control is often challenging, with some workspaces consistently feeling quite cold. Additionally, noise levels can be disruptive at times, particularly when calls and meetings are conducted in open areas. I also have concerns about workplace wellness. Given the in-office requirements, there appears to be a tendency for some employees to come into the office when visibly ill, which can create discomfort and increase the potential for illness transmission in shared workspaces. Finally, because many of us collaborate primarily with colleagues in other states, the value of in-office attendance is not always realized through increased face-to-face collaboration. Exploring opportunities to better align in-office expectations with team locations and collaboration needs may improve the overall employee experience. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• In my role, I am virtually meeting with all of my colleagues and very rarely do any meetings in person. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• The cubes we have does not allow for private conversations. Yes, there are huddle rooms and the phone booth we can go into, but those are often full and I simply don't have time to walk around to find a more private place. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• No physical aspects interfere with my work, but in-person work is very minimal in my role, which was originally created to be and remain virtual. — Associate, More than 10 years

• Space privacy - 90% of business associates that I must collaborate with are in other Pulse locations, and the matters discussed are sensitive by the nature of my role. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

• Many times, connect capsules or small meeting rooms are occupied therefore, associates hold meetings at their workstation which is a huge distraction. — Associate, More than 10 years

• The open desks don't support the sensitive nature of the meeting topics I'm speaking to on a daily basis and requires me to book a room or meeting room. The Focus capsules only allow a 2 hour max resulting in potentially multiple moves in a day to maintain privacy. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

POSITIVE · 15 (+7 more in HTML/CSV)

• I would prefer to work remotely on a permanent basis. I have a dedicated home office that provides a quiet, distraction-free environment for focused work. In addition, gas prices are rising, and my role does not require in-person customer interaction. Most of my colleagues are located in different states, so our collaboration and conversations will continue to take place virtually. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• As a Director I am expected to lead, not just attend. My team operates nationally, which requires consistent collaboration across multiple time zones. My current workload includes back-to-back virtual meetings often daily from 7:30 AM to 5:30 PM, maintaining an intentional in-office presence, and traveling to support providers in person alongside my consultants. As structured today, these expectations are not sustainable. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

• I think the office is fairly awesome and I enjoy working in the Atlanta location (who wouldn't!). That said, there are many days where I spend the entire day by myself in a conference room meeting and collaborating with others via Teams. My only wish is that there was more flexibility in the number of days in office. While I enjoy being here when I'm not in back to back meetings all day, it doesn't make sense to commute 3 hours just to sit alone in a conference room. I'm a professional and should be allowed to schedule my time in the way that most makes sense for my work schedule. That might mean 4 to 5 days in office one week and none the next. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• My responses are largely driven by the nature of my role, which requires significant focused individual work, analysis, forecasting, and virtual collaboration. For an extended period, I have had limited opportunities for in-person collaboration with members of my immediate team because most collaboration occurs remotely through Teams. As a result, commuting to the office often results in participating in the same virtual meetings I would attend from another location, while working with fewer monitors and less screen space than my primary workstation. Since my work is heavily data- and analysis-oriented, the reduced workspace can negatively affect productivity. The office environment is visually appealing and well maintained. However, the workspace can be challenging for concentration due to frequent conversations, speakerphone meetings, and personal phone use in nearby areas. For employees whose work requires sustained focus and minimal interruption, these conditions can make productive work more difficult. Overall, my responses reflect the fact that my role benefits most from quiet, distraction-free environments that support focused analytical work and effective virtual collaboration. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• I really enjoy working in the Atlanta office. I like the various types of spaces that are available so I can change up the view when I want. I also appreciate the availability of conference rooms for meetings and I like how quiet the floors are normally for thinking work. There are occasionally 'huddles' in common spaces where noise bleeds over, but the vast majority of the time everything works as planned and I can concentrate. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• Most of the focus rooms at the PulsePoint office appear to be reserved for Staff Vice Presidents and above only for 2 hours a day. However, in my role as an Enterprise Architect, I frequently need to conduct solution reviews, architecture discussions, and presentations that sometimes involve Attorney-Client Privileged information, confidential business discussions, or NDA-restricted content. During such situations, having access to a private room with appropriate display capabilities is important. I have found it challenging to secure suitable focus rooms, particularly those equipped with monitors that support effective presentations and collaboration. Opening access to additional focus rooms for roles that require confidential working sessions, or equipping more available rooms with extended monitor setups, would greatly improve productivity and help support secure and effective collaboration. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• Huddle rooms and smaller meeting rooms can have better soundproof materials. Headphones and Wifi care open getting disconnected with pulse point wifi. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• The workplace services aspect of the PulsePoint is one of its strongest features. The building is clean, well maintained, easy to access, and generally functions reliably. When support is needed, workplace and technology resources have been responsive and effective. Most of the areas where I see opportunities for improvement relate to the physical work environment rather than workplace services. My role is heavily focused on analysis, reporting, forecasting, and virtual collaboration, so workstation ergonomics, temperature comfort, noise management, and support for focused work have a greater impact on my day-to-day experience than amenities such as food service or community spaces. Overall, the services and operations teams do an excellent job maintaining the facility and supporting employees. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

Physical Environment (147 total)

NEGATIVE · 72 (+64 more in HTML/CSV)

• If I want to facilitate a virtual workshop, the spaces at the PulsePoint are not really configured for this. The smaller rooms for one person to use all have terrible lighting. It's too dark to facilitate there. Improve the offerings for rooms that one person can use to facilitate a virtual workshop. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• The need for privacy with a full workstation (e.g., two monitors with a power cord). Too many of the additional workspaces don't support much more than a laptop, which is not sufficient for me. — Director or Manager, 2 to 5 years

• The limitations placed on the capsule spaces (small office spaces with additional monitors) for people leaders is a hinderance. As people leaders we have to meet with our associates in 1-1 sessions monthly and additionally for any CAP discussions or performance/behavior issues that may arise outside of the regular meeting cadence. I think that the reservation timeframe for people leaders for these spaces should be increased to 4 hours and for nonpeople leaders it can remain at two hours. This would provide us with a block of time we can schedule our 1-1 meetings other meetings that require discretion during those times. It would give us more leverage and autonomy on how we schedule our day while in office and allow us to have the same or very similar set up we have in our home office. This would allow for example...screensharing on one monitor with the associate (ie metrics, etc) while leveraging the additional monitor to take notes on the call for our associate records. Trying to do this on a laptop is extremely challenging and having these types of conversation in a cube with other associates around doesn't protect the privacy of the associates. While I completely understand the need to provide structure around reserving these spaces and individuals booking these spaces for the entire day is unnecessary, the limitation of two hours for these spaces for people leaders is cumbersome especially with the requirement of being in office 3 days per week. Also, considering that we could be pulled into a conversation that requires discretion at any moment of the day. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

• no privacy - workstations are too close and often workplaces are noisy. — Associate, More than 10 years

• Currently we are not able to reserve capsule more than once in a day. As a manager, at times I have schedule interviews and it can be difficult to reserve a room with the current restriction in frequency and/or max time. Interviews are scheduled in intervals of 30 minutes and are not always consecutively, so this presents a challenge when working in the office. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

• My PulsePoint needs more private spaces for phone calls and virtual meetings at the office. Also, it would be nice if we could collaborate in person with co-workers located at other offices. I have never had the opportunity to meet my team in person. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• I am a Training Specialist and interact learners all over the states. The workstations do not allow privacy. There are times were my voice my interrupt others. However, the workstation does provide two additional screens that are needed to perform effective training. — Associate, More than 10 years

• most the screens are damaged or not working . Most of the times booked seats will be taken by some other persons. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

NEUTRAL / MIXED · 46 (+38 more in HTML/CSV)

• Work that requires longer than a 2 hour reservation for meeting rooms — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

• Projects with NDAs associated and work is with external entities. There is a challenge finding space for several hours where work is not overheard or seen. — Director or Manager, 2 to 5 years

• The office environment could be improved in a few areas. Temperature control is often challenging, with some workspaces consistently feeling quite cold. Additionally, noise levels can be disruptive at times, particularly when calls and meetings are conducted in open areas. I also have concerns about workplace wellness. Given the in-office requirements, there appears to be a tendency for some employees to come into the office when visibly ill, which can create discomfort and increase the potential for illness transmission in shared workspaces. Finally, because many of us collaborate primarily with colleagues in other states, the value of in-office attendance is not always realized through increased face-to-face collaboration. Exploring opportunities to better align in-office expectations with team locations and collaboration needs may improve the overall employee experience. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• The cubes we have does not allow for private conversations. Yes, there are huddle rooms and the phone booth we can go into, but those are often full and I simply don't have time to walk around to find a more private place. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• Client Management teams on the 19th floor are on virtual calls throughout the day. It is difficult to have to leave your desk with the extra screen and move to a free location where you are not disturbing others around you. It would be nice if the workspaces had more sound proofing and you could stay in the same location vs. having to unplug and find a private area and lose the extra screen. This would help with productivity. — Associate, More than 10 years

• Ability to book office spaces for longer than two hours. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

• Too many people talk on speaker phone in the office. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• Improve lighting in workstation areas and small rooms so that people do not say 'Oh it is dark in your PulsePoint' when they see me on camera while working on site. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

POSITIVE · 29 (+21 more in HTML/CSV)

• No, but I think seat assignments and booking should be better. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• My responses are largely driven by the nature of my role, which requires significant focused individual work, analysis, forecasting, and virtual collaboration. For an extended period, I have had limited opportunities for in-person collaboration with members of my immediate team because most collaboration occurs remotely through Teams. As a result, commuting to the office often results in participating in the same virtual meetings I would attend from another location, while working with fewer monitors and less screen space than my primary workstation. Since my work is heavily data- and analysis-oriented, the reduced workspace can negatively affect productivity. The office environment is visually appealing and well maintained. However, the workspace can be challenging for concentration due to frequent conversations, speakerphone meetings, and personal phone use in nearby areas. For employees whose work requires sustained focus and minimal interruption, these conditions can make productive work more difficult. Overall, my responses reflect the fact that my role benefits most from quiet, distraction-free environments that support focused analytical work and effective virtual collaboration. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• The treadmill desks have been down for quite some time now. I am not sure if we are getting new ones or if they will no longer be available. I used them quite often but haven't heard any updates about them. I am hoping they are being replaced or upgraded and not completely taken away as this helps me get some of my physical activity in during my workday while I work. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

• I find it challenging to reserve a focused room for focused working. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• It will be great to have some partition between workstations. When my dedicated floor was on maintenance, I found some section of 14 floor workstations with partition can help more with focus work. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• PLEASE consider adding permanent signs to all workstations reminding associates to check availability first before using workstation. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• Limited access to efficient spaces that support focused work. Spaces that include a setup that better support analysts/coders (mechanical keyboards, acoustic control, lighting, etc). — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• Closed off workstations for quiet and privacy. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

Amenities & Services (79 total)

NEGATIVE · 23 (+15 more in HTML/CSV)

• i do not like the badge out. sometimes the readers are slow to open — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• I hate having to constantly change desks if someone else books where I like to sit before I can book it. I like to sit in the same place every time I come to the office. I need more quick food options after 2 PM when the cafeteria closes because I often have meetings. I would also like anyone that is in my organization to sit in the same area. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• The brand of coffee located in the kitchen on each floor is absolutely horrible. There are so many better brands of coffee out there. The coffee at the office tastes terrible, worst coffee I have ever tasted, and I am forced to pay my own money in the lobby to get better coffee. Sometimes it is too hot and sweaty where you are sitting, and the cool air is only blowing in a specific spot instead of being more uniform. — Associate, More than 10 years

• The music can be too loud especially when trying to eat lunch and converse on the 8th floor and many times in meeting rooms the music is too loud — Associate, 6 mos to 24 mos.

• The lack of cubicles or offices that could give some semblance of privacy and the ability to focus is very limiting. As is, the physical structure of an open space filled with constant distractions of people talking, walking by, loudly closing doors (why do the maintenance room doors slam shut so loudly?) and the white noise that is just noise because it’s a loud sound of water running (or is that just water running?) is very limiting to effective focus. Also, the few times I have used a Focus Capsule, the temperature has been has been uncomfortably warm. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

• Vegetarian options went down drastically after the food options were made fully charged. The salad bar was good prior to when it was fully paid by Elevance but now with what we pay, there are no good options especially for vegetarians — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• Large group meetings that take place in the open concept section of the cafeteria are disruptive to the 9th floor. — Director or Manager, 2 to 5 years

• I miss the food subsidy but completely understand the need to pull back on it. Sometimes the food items have seemed a bit overpriced. I also miss the frequent popup restaurants from the local community. However, now that people have to buy their own food, I understand that it may not be worth it to have vendors come in any longer. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

NEUTRAL / MIXED · 20 (+12 more in HTML/CSV)

• Pulse Point hands on training, seminars, certification upskilling, people skill events — Associate, 6 mos to 24 mos.

• too much social interaction and not being able to concentrate on my work — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• Better food option, more healthy choices — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• Especially logistics and restroom cleanness — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• Choice & Cost of food/beverage pushes me to seek lunch outside the building. (e.g. For the cost that I have to pay, I could go across the street and get a better choice of food options for around the same cost. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• Wish there are more fresh food and vegetarian options in Cafe. Also, for Carelon associates the onsite help desk said they cannot help, and only ELV Health associates they have support in place. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• Would love to see return of pop-up food vendors in cafeteria. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• 1) Using signage within the bathroom stalls or main area to instruct associates to flush the toilet. Provide the location of the manual flush button and reiterate how unsanitary it is to leave feces, blood and urine sitting in an open environment. 2) If possible, bring back the vegetarian sandwich to-go options. Ex. garden veggies with hummus spread tomato mozzarella and spinach or a veggie wrap with dressing — Associate, 2 to 5 years

POSITIVE · 36 (+28 more in HTML/CSV)

• I would prefer to work remotely on a permanent basis. I have a dedicated home office that provides a quiet, distraction-free environment for focused work. In addition, gas prices are rising, and my role does not require in-person customer interaction. Most of my colleagues are located in different states, so our collaboration and conversations will continue to take place virtually. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• the cafeteria food options can be improved, and the food volume not very consistent: some staff may give smaller volume if seeing female ordering the food. — Associate, More than 10 years

• Availability if onsite food is helpful — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• The food available for lunch is just not good. It used to be good before Covid. I like the carbonated water machines. I like that there is a coffee shop in the lobby. Some of the chairs around the floor have split arm rests. The monitor arms have become loose over time and require tightening. I know how to do this, but I often have to do this if I sit in a different location. Overall, this is a nice building. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• The Atlanta office services are excellent. The security team, cleaning staff, and overall support teams do a fantastic job maintaining a welcoming, high-quality environment. The space is beautiful, even though it doesn't always function well for the needs of my role. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

• Although the Atlanta PulsePoint has on-site food and beverage options, the costs (though supposedly subsidized) are too high. Also, I'm not sure if there has been a vendor change, but the quality of the hot food has declined since the initial opening. The grill is a nice option, and the food is good, but too expensive. — Associate, More than 10 years

• It is so CLEAN here, I love it. The staff who keep this place clean are great at what they do! The security guards on the ground floor are also awesome and I love them. — Associate, 6 mos to 24 mos.

• The security staff is ALWAYS very pleasant and greets you upon entry. The Technology Bar has been my one-stop to get my IT tickets resolved. The maintenance staff does an excellent job of keeping our facilities nice and clean. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

Technology (108 total)

NEGATIVE · 46 (+38 more in HTML/CSV)

• The need for privacy with a full workstation (e.g., two monitors with a power cord). Too many of the additional workspaces don't support much more than a laptop, which is not sufficient for me. — Director or Manager, 2 to 5 years

• The limitations placed on the capsule spaces (small office spaces with additional monitors) for people leaders is a hinderance. As people leaders we have to meet with our associates in 1-1 sessions monthly and additionally for any CAP discussions or performance/behavior issues that may arise outside of the regular meeting cadence. I think that the reservation timeframe for people leaders for these spaces should be increased to 4 hours and for nonpeople leaders it can remain at two hours. This would provide us with a block of time we can schedule our 1-1 meetings other meetings that require discretion during those times. It would give us more leverage and autonomy on how we schedule our day while in office and allow us to have the same or very similar set up we have in our home office. This would allow for example...screensharing on one monitor with the associate (ie metrics, etc) while leveraging the additional monitor to take notes on the call for our associate records. Trying to do this on a laptop is extremely challenging and having these types of conversation in a cube with other associates around doesn't protect the privacy of the associates. While I completely understand the need to provide structure around reserving these spaces and individuals booking these spaces for the entire day is unnecessary, the limitation of two hours for these spaces for people leaders is cumbersome especially with the requirement of being in office 3 days per week. Also, considering that we could be pulled into a conversation that requires discretion at any moment of the day. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

• I don't really understand why I come into the office and spend most of my collab time on the phone. I wish I worked with more people in the office. But that's not how teams are built. — Director or Manager, 2 to 5 years

• Individual work with minimal interruption and tasks requiring discretion is not fully supported. There should be more capsule space with monitors. Focus rooms are all we have to use with a time cap on them — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• Limitation of power outlets at many seating options — Associate, More than 10 years

• Lack of privacy. Loud surroundings with other people who are in an office but working virtually on Teams calls. — Associate, More than 10 years

• The lack of availability to work privately with a full workstation (e.g., 2 monitors). Most 'side rooms' you can only bring your laptop. — Director or Manager, 2 to 5 years

• The chairs for the cubes are terrible! People swap the chairs around trying to find ones that are 'fixed / set' where the seat is level and not lower in the front. and they are very difficult to adjust, even with directions. The cubes have no hooks or places to put a coat, there is no safe place to put your purse. The monitors are difficult to set and are tightened to prevent tilting. You can't adjust the main monitor to be directly in front of you. In the morning during warmer months the air conditioning is not turned for early workers like me. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

NEUTRAL / MIXED · 33 (+25 more in HTML/CSV)

• The focus and connect modules are not soundproof and muffled conversations are audible. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• Client Management teams on the 19th floor are on virtual calls throughout the day. It is difficult to have to leave your desk with the extra screen and move to a free location where you are not disturbing others around you. It would be nice if the workspaces had more sound proofing and you could stay in the same location vs. having to unplug and find a private area and lose the extra screen. This would help with productivity. — Associate, More than 10 years

• Improve lighting in workstation areas and small rooms so that people do not say 'Oh it is dark in your PulsePoint' when they see me on camera while working on site. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• Sometimes the additional Monitors won't connect or display, if you could regularly check on this issue that would be great! — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• I think this PulsePoint is absolutely amazing, beautiful, and a pleasure to work in. The only comment I have is I do depend on the focus/individual rooms for virtual meetings (where I need to be on camera talking). I've not yet had a problem accessing them when I've needed them but any way to get more of those types of spaces would be helpful (especially if more people are ever in the office at the same time) — Associate, 6 mos to 24 mos.

• Location of power source and outlets. Commute — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• Very few spaces that have dual screens that are discreet — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• Many times, connect capsules or small meeting rooms are occupied therefore, associates hold meetings at their workstation which is a huge distraction. — Associate, More than 10 years

POSITIVE · 29 (+21 more in HTML/CSV)

• I think the office is fairly awesome and I enjoy working in the Atlanta location (who wouldn't!). That said, there are many days where I spend the entire day by myself in a conference room meeting and collaborating with others via Teams. My only wish is that there was more flexibility in the number of days in office. While I enjoy being here when I'm not in back to back meetings all day, it doesn't make sense to commute 3 hours just to sit alone in a conference room. I'm a professional and should be allowed to schedule my time in the way that most makes sense for my work schedule. That might mean 4 to 5 days in office one week and none the next. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• When I connect my MacBook to the docking station at the PulsePoint office, both external monitors are detected, but they are mirroring/duplicating each other instead of being recognized as two separate displays. As a result, I only have one extended workspace across my MacBook and a single effective external screen. As an Enterprise Architect, I frequently work with multiple applications, documents, and architecture diagrams simultaneously. Having both external monitors configured as independent extended displays would significantly improve my productivity. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• My responses are largely driven by the nature of my role, which requires significant focused individual work, analysis, forecasting, and virtual collaboration. For an extended period, I have had limited opportunities for in-person collaboration with members of my immediate team because most collaboration occurs remotely through Teams. As a result, commuting to the office often results in participating in the same virtual meetings I would attend from another location, while working with fewer monitors and less screen space than my primary workstation. Since my work is heavily data- and analysis-oriented, the reduced workspace can negatively affect productivity. The office environment is visually appealing and well maintained. However, the workspace can be challenging for concentration due to frequent conversations, speakerphone meetings, and personal phone use in nearby areas. For employees whose work requires sustained focus and minimal interruption, these conditions can make productive work more difficult. Overall, my responses reflect the fact that my role benefits most from quiet, distraction-free environments that support focused analytical work and effective virtual collaboration. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• Limited access to efficient spaces that support focused work. Spaces that include a setup that better support analysts/coders (mechanical keyboards, acoustic control, lighting, etc). — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• Ability to find flexible working space. It is not very clear which floors, quads, ad workspaces are available for use and if those are reserved for particular teams or open to all. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• Most of the focus rooms at the PulsePoint office appear to be reserved for Staff Vice Presidents and above only for 2 hours a day. However, in my role as an Enterprise Architect, I frequently need to conduct solution reviews, architecture discussions, and presentations that sometimes involve Attorney-Client Privileged information, confidential business discussions, or NDA-restricted content. During such situations, having access to a private room with appropriate display capabilities is important. I have found it challenging to secure suitable focus rooms, particularly those equipped with monitors that support effective presentations and collaboration. Opening access to additional focus rooms for roles that require confidential working sessions, or equipping more available rooms with extended monitor setups, would greatly improve productivity and help support secure and effective collaboration. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• Huddle rooms and smaller meeting rooms can have better soundproof materials. Headphones and Wifi care open getting disconnected with pulse point wifi. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• The food available for lunch is just not good. It used to be good before Covid. I like the carbonated water machines. I like that there is a coffee shop in the lobby. Some of the chairs around the floor have split arm rests. The monitor arms have become loose over time and require tightening. I know how to do this, but I often have to do this if I sit in a different location. Overall, this is a nice building. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

Workplace Operations (94 total)

NEGATIVE · 31 (+23 more in HTML/CSV)

• If I want to facilitate a virtual workshop, the spaces at the PulsePoint are not really configured for this. The smaller rooms for one person to use all have terrible lighting. It's too dark to facilitate there. Improve the offerings for rooms that one person can use to facilitate a virtual workshop. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• The only other thing is the ability to store/maintain required, hard-copy legal documents. The PulsePoint doesn't really facilitate that and, at least in my view, home isn't the best place for that type of document to be stored. — Associate, More than 10 years

• Cell signal in the building especially the back side of the building is really poor. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• I believe there are some functions that should have priority access / extended access to private spaces. I work in Talent and many of my conversations are HIGHLY confidential. In the 1 quad that we are aligned to, there is 1 private office, which can be booked by anyone in the building. It's frustrating to have to go to another floor to have a conversation. Also, with back-to-back meetings or trainings that require privacy but with a 2-hour limit, I've had to work from home more than 2 days a week due to lack of space. — Director or Manager, 2 to 5 years

• I find the building to be cold. The signage, while plentiful seems cryptic. I am sure if I were int he office more I would get the hang of it. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• In my experience common areas are very cold and do not allow for the focused/discretionary work I must complete. Reserved spaces are often occupied when I arrive. Screens no longer update to show that a focus/capsule is reserved. It is uncomfortable when I have to enforce my reservation and ask someone to relocate. It is also frustrating that I am limited to only two hours per day to reserve focus/capsule. I am a people leader 8 hours a day, I often have unscheduled/unplanned conversations in addition to planned conversations that aren't appropriate for being held in the common areas. I am often also engaged in lively and collaborative meetings that require me to be able to speak freely and I know that is distracting to other people when I am in a common area. It may not be appropriate to compare my role to other roles but it seems as though the focus/capsule areas should be reserved for people leaders and ICs at a certain level vs. open to everyone and that they should be able to be reserved for longer periods of time. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• The lack of cubicles or offices that could give some semblance of privacy and the ability to focus is very limiting. As is, the physical structure of an open space filled with constant distractions of people talking, walking by, loudly closing doors (why do the maintenance room doors slam shut so loudly?) and the white noise that is just noise because it’s a loud sound of water running (or is that just water running?) is very limiting to effective focus. Also, the few times I have used a Focus Capsule, the temperature has been has been uncomfortably warm. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

• There are very few 'open' spaces for associates who don't belong to one of the areas that are posted on each floor. So, when I am at the office the 'open' areas fill up. It is often distracting when many people are on meetings and you can hear them all talking. On the flip side of that it is hard to find a space to work when you have meetings all day and need to be talking on the phone, but also need to use dual monitors so you can't go to the booths. — Associate, More than 10 years

NEUTRAL / MIXED · 30 (+22 more in HTML/CSV)

• Projects with NDAs associated and work is with external entities. There is a challenge finding space for several hours where work is not overheard or seen. — Director or Manager, 2 to 5 years

• the 2 hour restriction for rooms to be productive should be 4 hour limit for those of us who work on sensitive topics, have meetings on sensitive topics and work on sensitive information. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• n/a. I drive to the office to sit on the phone all day. — Associate, More than 10 years

• commute to the office is long so I feel tired after reaching the office which means it will take longer time for me to calm and focus on work. — Associate, More than 10 years

• Drive time to and from the office is the primary physical aspect that hinders the ability to work effectively. It consumes so much time and energy which could otherwise be utilized in more efficient productivity. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• Location of power source and outlets. Commute — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• The distance and traffic to get there. If there were better public transportation to the outer perimeter, I think it would alleviate the traffic. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• y responses reflect the needs of a role that is heavily focused on analysis, forecasting, reporting, and other computer-based work requiring sustained concentration. While the facility is visually appealing and generally comfortable, there are opportunities to improve the workstation experience. The individual workstations are relatively small, and the monitor setups do not always provide the screen space needed for data-intensive work. In some cases, monitor arms and workstation equipment appear to require maintenance or adjustment to remain ergonomically effective over time. Temperature is the most significant environmental challenge for me personally. The workspace is consistently colder than I find comfortable, often requiring a sweater or jacket year-round, including during warmer months. While I recognize temperature preferences vary by individual, the current environment can be distracting during extended periods of focused work. Overall, the building provides an attractive workplace, but improvements to workstation ergonomics, equipment maintenance, and environmental comfort would further support employees whose roles require long periods of concentrated computer work. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

POSITIVE · 33 (+25 more in HTML/CSV)

• The Pulse Point may support but I'm unaware. My commute into and out of the Pulse Point ensures the experience is consistently less than positive. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• I think the office is fairly awesome and I enjoy working in the Atlanta location (who wouldn't!). That said, there are many days where I spend the entire day by myself in a conference room meeting and collaborating with others via Teams. My only wish is that there was more flexibility in the number of days in office. While I enjoy being here when I'm not in back to back meetings all day, it doesn't make sense to commute 3 hours just to sit alone in a conference room. I'm a professional and should be allowed to schedule my time in the way that most makes sense for my work schedule. That might mean 4 to 5 days in office one week and none the next. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• The treadmill desks have been down for quite some time now. I am not sure if we are getting new ones or if they will no longer be available. I used them quite often but haven't heard any updates about them. I am hoping they are being replaced or upgraded and not completely taken away as this helps me get some of my physical activity in during my workday while I work. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

• It will be great to have some partition between workstations. When my dedicated floor was on maintenance, I found some section of 14 floor workstations with partition can help more with focus work. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• PLEASE consider adding permanent signs to all workstations reminding associates to check availability first before using workstation. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• I suppose my music statement belonged here. I love this building and the staff. — Associate, More than 10 years

• Most of the focus rooms at the PulsePoint office appear to be reserved for Staff Vice Presidents and above only for 2 hours a day. However, in my role as an Enterprise Architect, I frequently need to conduct solution reviews, architecture discussions, and presentations that sometimes involve Attorney-Client Privileged information, confidential business discussions, or NDA-restricted content. During such situations, having access to a private room with appropriate display capabilities is important. I have found it challenging to secure suitable focus rooms, particularly those equipped with monitors that support effective presentations and collaboration. Opening access to additional focus rooms for roles that require confidential working sessions, or equipping more available rooms with extended monitor setups, would greatly improve productivity and help support secure and effective collaboration. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• Since I come 3 days a week I think I will like place of work to be consistent. Currently it is taken up by some one else since I usually come around 10:30 as my drive is 1 hr. and I have to attend early morning meeting at home. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

Policy / Experience (98 total)

NEGATIVE · 25 (+17 more in HTML/CSV)

• If I want to facilitate a virtual workshop, the spaces at the PulsePoint are not really configured for this. The smaller rooms for one person to use all have terrible lighting. It's too dark to facilitate there. Improve the offerings for rooms that one person can use to facilitate a virtual workshop. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• The limitations placed on the capsule spaces (small office spaces with additional monitors) for people leaders is a hinderance. As people leaders we have to meet with our associates in 1-1 sessions monthly and additionally for any CAP discussions or performance/behavior issues that may arise outside of the regular meeting cadence. I think that the reservation timeframe for people leaders for these spaces should be increased to 4 hours and for nonpeople leaders it can remain at two hours. This would provide us with a block of time we can schedule our 1-1 meetings other meetings that require discretion during those times. It would give us more leverage and autonomy on how we schedule our day while in office and allow us to have the same or very similar set up we have in our home office. This would allow for example...screensharing on one monitor with the associate (ie metrics, etc) while leveraging the additional monitor to take notes on the call for our associate records. Trying to do this on a laptop is extremely challenging and having these types of conversation in a cube with other associates around doesn't protect the privacy of the associates. While I completely understand the need to provide structure around reserving these spaces and individuals booking these spaces for the entire day is unnecessary, the limitation of two hours for these spaces for people leaders is cumbersome especially with the requirement of being in office 3 days per week. Also, considering that we could be pulled into a conversation that requires discretion at any moment of the day. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

• I don't really understand why I come into the office and spend most of my collab time on the phone. I wish I worked with more people in the office. But that's not how teams are built. — Director or Manager, 2 to 5 years

• The only other thing is the ability to store/maintain required, hard-copy legal documents. The PulsePoint doesn't really facilitate that and, at least in my view, home isn't the best place for that type of document to be stored. — Associate, More than 10 years

• We need more true 'offices' with doors. In sales, we make a lot of phone calls and participate in a lot of virtual meetings. It is really frustrating to be constantly getting up, packing up my laptop and looking for a room. I have a few co-workers that are extremely loud on calls and it is so frustrating to listen to it all day long. — Associate, More than 10 years

• I and ALL of the other parents out there that I have spoken to are NOT HAPPY with the visitor changes. I am a single mother my son is on summer break. The new changes are not conducive or practical for a work/home life balance. Even though Elevance says they supports a home/work like balance, this change does not represent this. It makes coming into the office an inconvenience. It is discriminatory towards those who have kids. I hope this change is reverted. — Associate, More than 10 years

• I believe there are some functions that should have priority access / extended access to private spaces. I work in Talent and many of my conversations are HIGHLY confidential. In the 1 quad that we are aligned to, there is 1 private office, which can be booked by anyone in the building. It's frustrating to have to go to another floor to have a conversation. Also, with back-to-back meetings or trainings that require privacy but with a 2-hour limit, I've had to work from home more than 2 days a week due to lack of space. — Director or Manager, 2 to 5 years

• The chairs for the cubes are terrible! People swap the chairs around trying to find ones that are 'fixed / set' where the seat is level and not lower in the front. and they are very difficult to adjust, even with directions. The cubes have no hooks or places to put a coat, there is no safe place to put your purse. The monitors are difficult to set and are tightened to prevent tilting. You can't adjust the main monitor to be directly in front of you. In the morning during warmer months the air conditioning is not turned for early workers like me. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

NEUTRAL / MIXED · 20 (+12 more in HTML/CSV)

• The office environment could be improved in a few areas. Temperature control is often challenging, with some workspaces consistently feeling quite cold. Additionally, noise levels can be disruptive at times, particularly when calls and meetings are conducted in open areas. I also have concerns about workplace wellness. Given the in-office requirements, there appears to be a tendency for some employees to come into the office when visibly ill, which can create discomfort and increase the potential for illness transmission in shared workspaces. Finally, because many of us collaborate primarily with colleagues in other states, the value of in-office attendance is not always realized through increased face-to-face collaboration. Exploring opportunities to better align in-office expectations with team locations and collaboration needs may improve the overall employee experience. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• Sometimes the additional Monitors won't connect or display, if you could regularly check on this issue that would be great! — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• I would like to use wellness rooms and walking treadmills as I am seated a lot during my work time due to meetings etc., which impacts back issues. I currently use sit stand desks which is very helpful. I walk around on the floor for 2 minutes every 30 minutes per my doctor suggestion. Having a massage chair or wellness room to rest would be awesome - Overall, I love Atlanta Pulse point and it has awesome amenities. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• My PulsePoint needs more private spaces for phone calls and virtual meetings at the office. I would love some cubicles to be available for more concentration centered work and to prevent others from seeing PHI on my computer screen as I work. — Associate, 2 to 5 years

• Accommodations are there however, I was told that I could only reserve a workstation, not a room so that I would not disturb others as a trainer. My learners are NEVER located at my PulsePoint, they are always remote. — Associate, More than 10 years

• It would be wonderful if the swinging arm mechanism connected to the monitors were more flexible to maneuver. — Associate, More than 10 years

• The open, low-profile cubicles make noise management challenging. My team and I are in meetings most of the day, and sit in an area with others who are also often in other meetings. Sitting in a flex space all day is not feasible and minimizes the value of being in the office. Cubicles with higher walls or having some other manner by which noise can be controlled would significantly improve the in-office experience. It will also mitigate the potential for clients on the phone hearing conversations that should be internal. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• I love the treadmills however seems that they often are not working properly. — Associate, More than 10 years

POSITIVE · 53 (+45 more in HTML/CSV)

• No. PulsePoint Atlanta is a great place to work with great support by all involved. — Associate, More than 10 years

• As a Director I am expected to lead, not just attend. My team operates nationally, which requires consistent collaboration across multiple time zones. My current workload includes back-to-back virtual meetings often daily from 7:30 AM to 5:30 PM, maintaining an intentional in-office presence, and traveling to support providers in person alongside my consultants. As structured today, these expectations are not sustainable. — Director or Manager, 6 to 10 years

• I think the office is fairly awesome and I enjoy working in the Atlanta location (who wouldn't!). That said, there are many days where I spend the entire day by myself in a conference room meeting and collaborating with others via Teams. My only wish is that there was more flexibility in the number of days in office. While I enjoy being here when I'm not in back to back meetings all day, it doesn't make sense to commute 3 hours just to sit alone in a conference room. I'm a professional and should be allowed to schedule my time in the way that most makes sense for my work schedule. That might mean 4 to 5 days in office one week and none the next. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• The tech bar is excellent to have local. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• I love the Quiet workspace zone. — Associate, 6 to 10 years

• It will be great to have some partition between workstations. When my dedicated floor was on maintenance, I found some section of 14 floor workstations with partition can help more with focus work. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• I really enjoy working in the Atlanta office. I like the various types of spaces that are available so I can change up the view when I want. I also appreciate the availability of conference rooms for meetings and I like how quiet the floors are normally for thinking work. There are occasionally 'huddles' in common spaces where noise bleeds over, but the vast majority of the time everything works as planned and I can concentrate. — Director or Manager, More than 10 years

• I suppose my music statement belonged here. I love this building and the staff. — Associate, More than 10 years

Data source & method. Built from the PulsePoint survey export · completed responses only · 10 in-scope sites. Support responses map to a 0–100 scale; each dimension is the average of its items; the overall Composite applies the official dimension weights (Work 35 · Service 25 · Physical 20 · Digital & Tech 20). A simple (equal) average of the four dimensions = 77, which matches the figure in the Tableau deck. Friction & RYG per the official Tableau spec · Priority = 40% volume + 35% share negative + 25% Friction.